www.freakchic.com: new york turned out big for keNNy keNNy shownew york turned out big for keNNy keNNy show

Last night after being 10 hours in a rerouted flight from London (again due to the spreading cloud of volcanic ash) I got home so late with only one hour to change into a gazelle mood to go to the opening of "Bon Vivant in New York" with photographs by Kenny Kenny at the Collective Gallery (Chinatown). To see the exhibit I had to go up to the fifth floor in a walk up building. I did it in mega heels...I would have gone twenty floors up more with a smile. In the same narrow stair case passed Bill Cunningham, Roxanne Lowit, Kelly Cutrone, Amanda Lepore, Patrick McDonald, Patricia Field, Michael Musto, Antony Hegarty, Paul Alexander, Mao Padilha, Dietmar Busse, Joey Arias, Robert W. Richards, Miestorm Pierre Serpent, Vanity Society, Thomas Onorato, James Aguiar, Alex Geana and so many sublime people that live in this great city we call New York. They were there to show support and love to Kenny Kenny who we all know and needs no introduction. "Bon Vivant in New York" is an exhibit divided in two series: 18 portraits inspired by German expressionism where Kenny shares his shadow photographs and his nocturnal entourage of iconic creative characters. It was my favorite part of the exhibit, and I had to get one of Sultana's (who also later performed in the event). The second series of 22 moments were inspired by photo journalism where Kenny explored the nightlife with great shots of night clubbers, all on black and white paper. The show is curated by Virginie Sommet and produced by Muffinhead. The exhibition benefits Ghar Sita Mutu House with a heart by donating 45% of the proceeds from the art. Very generous, very Kenny Kenny...very memorable night!
